

DC Circuits

INTRODUCTION:

In this exercise you will be using a computer simulation called the Circuit Construction Kit \(CCK\) instead of real wires, bulbs, and resistors. The goals of this lab are to complete our understanding of how voltage, current, and resistance relate to each other in circuits, and to learn how to use an ammeter to measure current directly.

NOTES:

To measure how much current is flowing through a circuit, the current needs to flow through the ammeter. Recall that when we measured voltage differences, we attached the voltmeter in parallel with whatever we were measuring. To measure current, the ammeter needs to be placed in series with the element (resistor, bulb, battery) that we are measuring (see figure at right).

Ammeter configured to measure current.

PART I: MEASURING CURRENT DIRECTLY WITH THE AMMETER

Drag and drop one $R=2\ \Omega$ resistor into the work area (if you right click on a resistor, you can change its resistance) and two light bulbs into your work area.

Construct the circuit shown on the right, consisting of two light bulbs (with the same resistance) in series with a battery. (The resistor $R=2\ \Omega$ will be connected later). Increase the voltage across the battery to 20 V (right click on the battery to change its voltage).

Predict what will happen to the current flowing from the battery when you place a ($R = 2\ \Omega$) resistor in parallel with bulb #2 as shown in the schematic. Explain your reasoning.
