1. In what way is a regression line a mathematical model?

We are trying to model a real world situation with an equation, and the equation of that regression line is what models the behavior of the data.

2. What is extrapolation and why is it dangerous?

We only really know the behavior of the data for the range that we gathered it for. Extrapolation means that you go outside the bounds of your data to predict. The trend that we see may not continue before or after the data we have collected.

3. What is a least-squares regression line?

A least squares regression line is a line that minimizes the sum of the squared distances from each point to the line.

4. What is the formula for the equation of the least-squares regression line?

$Y = a + bx$, where the line goes through the point $(\bar{x}, \bar{y})$ and slope $b = r \frac{s_y}{s_x}$

5. The least-squares regression line always passes through the point ...? $(\bar{x}, \bar{y})$

6. What is a residual?

The difference between what the model predicted would happen and what actually happened.
Observed - Expected

7. How can you calculate residuals on your calculator and use this to produce a residual plot?

Do a linear regression. When you do the linear regression, it stores the residuals automatically in your LIST menu. Then highlight one of your lists, go to the LIST menu, select residuals and it will put it into the list. Then go to statplot and create a scatterplot using your explanatory variable list, and your residuals list.

8. If a least-squares regression line fits the data well, what characteristics should the residual plot exhibit?

It should have a scattered random look to it with no apparent pattern.

9. The table below gives data on the number of powerboats registered in Florida and the number of manatees killed by boats in the years from 1977 to 1990.
