Building on Knowledge David Bartholomew, 2009-01-26 This guide shows design practices and other construction professionals how to manage knowledge successfully It explains how to develop and implement a knowledge management strategy and how to avoid the pitfalls focusing on the techniques of learning and knowledge sharing that are most relevant in professional practice Expensive IT based solutions bought off the shelf rarely succeed in a practice context so the emphasis here is on people centred techniques which recognise and meet real business knowledge needs and fit in with the organisational culture Knowledge is supplanting physical assets as the dominant basis of capital value and an understanding of how knowledge is acquired shared and used is increasingly crucial in organisational success Most business leaders recognise this but few have yet succeeded in making it the pervasive influence on management practice that it needs to become that has turned out to be harder than it looks Construction professionals are among those who have furthest to go and most to gain Design is a knowledge based activity and project managers contractors and clients as well as architects and engineers have always learned from experience and shared their knowledge with immediate colleagues But the intuitive processes they have traditionally used break down alarmingly quickly as organisations grow even simply dividing the office over two floors can noticeably reduce communication At the same time increasingly sophisticated construction technology and more demanding markets are making effective management of knowledge ever more important Other knowledge intensive industries such as management consultancy pharmaceuticals and IT are well ahead in adopting a more systematic approach to learning and sharing knowledge and seeing the benefits in improved technical capacity efficiency customer satisfaction and reduced risk Report on Reservation and Resource Development and Protection United States. American Indian Policy Review Commission. Task Force Seven, Reservation and Resource Development and Protection, 1976
