THE WHISPERING SHADOWS

On a chilly October night, as the wind howled through the trees along Willow Creek, the old Thompson house stood dark and quiet. No one was to go near it, especially on Halloween. The townspeople often spoke of legends whispered of shadows that moved in ways that could be heard even when no one was there.

Drema and her friend Liam had heard these stories at their school. They were too scared to visit the old house, but on Halloween night, they decided to go. They were too curious to resist. That Halloween night, they stood in front of the Thompson house, determined to see if the stories were true or just a tale.

As they crept up the creaking stone steps, a strange feeling came over them. The door opened on its own, revealing a dark hallway. Into the shadows, their flashlight beams pierced the darkness. The walls were covered in a thick web of dust and cobwebs. In the dim light, they saw portraits on the walls of people who had lived there. As they walked further into the house, the whispers began. At first, they thought it was just the wind, but then it grew louder, colder, and more menacing.

Suddenly, a shadow stretched across the hallway. Liam's flashlight beam hit it, and he saw a figure standing in the doorway. Before Demra could answer, they heard footsteps. Not coming to move or to figure out who was there, but coming to move away. A figure slowly emerged from the shadows. It was a woman in a long, patterned dress, her face pale and her hair dark. She looked down at the ground, her feet not seeming to touch it. "You shouldn't be here," she murmured in a voice that seemed to come from the walls. "Leave now."

But without thought, they ran. Their flashlight beams lit up the hallway as they ran. They heard the door slam shut behind them. They looked back and saw the woman standing in the doorway, her face pale and her hair dark. They had seen her - and they never returned to the house.
