

- 10 The one-line consolidation is adjusted when the investee's income includes extraordinary items, gains or losses from discontinued operations, or cumulative-effect type adjustments. In this case, the investor's share of the investee's ordinary income is reported as investment income under a one-line consolidation, but the investor's share of extraordinary items, cumulative-effect type adjustments, and gains and losses from discontinued operations is combined with similar items of the investor.
- 11 The remaining 15 percent interest in the investee is accounted for under the fair value/cost method, and the investment account balance immediately after the sale becomes the new cost basis.
- 12 Yes. When an investee has preferred stock in its capital structure, the investor has to allocate the investee's income to preferred and common stockholders. Then, the investor takes up its share of the investee's income allocated to common stockholders in applying the equity method. The allocation is not necessary when the investee has only common stock outstanding.
- 13 Goodwill impairment losses are calculated by business reporting units. For each reporting unit, the company must first determine the fair values of net assets. The fair value of the reporting unit is the amount at which it could be purchased in a current market transaction. This may be based on market prices, discounted cash flow analyses, or similar current transactions. This is done in the same manner as is done to originally record a combination. Any excess measured fair value is the fair value of goodwill. The company then compares the goodwill fair value estimate to the carrying value of goodwill to determine if there has been an impairment during the period.
- 14 Yes. Impairment losses for subsidiaries are computed as outlined in the solution to question 13. Companies compare fair values to book values for equity method investments as a whole. Firms may recognize impairments for equity method investments as a whole, but perform no separate goodwill impairment.
