Marine Mammals and Low-Frequency Sound National Research Council, Commission on Geosciences, Environment and Resources, Ocean Studies Board, Committee to Review Results of ATOC's Marine Mammal Research Program, 2000-06-11 Sound has become a major tool for studying the ocean Although the ocean is relatively opaque to light it is relatively transparent to sound Sound having frequencies below 1 000 Hertz Hz is often defined as low frequency sound The speed of sound is proportional to the temperature of the water through which it passes Therefore sound speed can be used to infer the average temperature of the water volume through which sound waves have passed The relationship between water temperature and the speed of sound is the basis for the Acoustic Thermometry of Ocean Climate ATOC experiment The ATOC experiment is designed to monitor the travel time of sound between sources off the coasts of Hawaii and California and several receivers around the Pacific Ocean in order to detect trends in ocean temperature and for other research and monitoring purposes Some whales seals and fish use low frequency sound to communicate and to sense their environments For example baleen whales and some toothed whales are known to use and respond to low frequency sound emitted by other individuals of their species Sharks are not known to produce low frequency sound but are attracted to pulsed low frequency sounds Therefore it is possible that human generated low frequency sound could interfere with the natural behavior of whales sharks and some other marine animals Marine Mammals and Low Frequency Sound is an updated review of the National Research Council 1994 report Low Frequency Sound and Marine Mammals Current Knowledge and Research Needs
