Making Strategies in Spatial Planning Maria Cerreta, Grazia Concilio, Valeria Monno, 2010-09-11 This provocative collection of essays challenges traditional ideas of strategic spatial planning and opens up new avenues of analysis and research The diversity of contributions here suggests that we need to rethink spatial planning in several far reaching ways Let me suggest several avenues of such rethinking that can have both theoretical and practical consequences First we need to overcome simplistic bifurcations or dichotomies of assessing outcomes and processes separately from one another To lapse into the nostalgia of imagining that outcome analysis can exhaust strategic planners work might appeal to academics content to study what should be but it will doom itself to further irrelevance ignorance of politics and rationalistic technocratic fantasies But to lapse into an optimism that good process is all that strategic planning requires similarly rests upon a cition that no credible planning analyst believes that enough talk will miraculously transcend conflict and produce agreement Neither single minded approach can work for both avoid dealing with conflict and power and both too easily avoid dealing with the messiness and the practicalities of negotiating out conflicting interests and values and doing so in ethically and politically critical ways far from resting content with mere compromise Second we must rethink the sanctity of expertise By considering analyses of planning outcomes as inseparable from planning processes these accounts help us to see expertise and substantive analysis as being on tap ready to put into use rather than being particularly and technocratically on
