Answers to Review Questions

Note: Answers to odd-numbered review questions are found in Appendix D of the textbook.

1. Redundancy is the duplication of data or the storing of the same data in more than one place. Redundancy wastes space, makes the updating of data more cumbersome and time-consuming, and can lead to inconsistencies.
2. The problems, other than redundancy, associated with the nondatabase approach to processing data include difficulties accessing related data, limited security features to protect data from access by unauthorized users, limited ability for multiple users to update the same data at the same time, and size limitations.
3. An entry is a person, place, object, event, or idea for which you want to store and process data. An attribute, which is also called a field or column in many database systems, is a characteristic or property of an entry.
4. A relationship is an association between entities. A one-to-many relationship exists between two entities when each row in the first entity matches many rows in the second entity and each row in the second entity matches only one row in the first entity.
5. A database is a structure that can store information about multiple types of entities, the attributes of those entities, and the relationships among the entities.
6. In a database system, you create a one-to-many relationship by using common columns in the two tables.
7. An E-R diagram represents a database in a visual way by using a rectangle for each entity, using a line to connect two entities that have a relationship, and placing a dot at the end of a line to indicate the "many" part of a one-to-many relationship.
8. A database management system (DBMS) is a program, or a collection of programs, through which users interact with a database.
9. Database design is the process of determining the table structure of the desired database.
10. A form is a screen object used to maintain, view, and print data from a database.
