I met my younger self for coffee this morning.

We were both very nervous about the meeting process.

We ordered a caramel macchiato, I ordered an iced oat milk latte.

We told her how she can't wait to get out from under our parents' house and move out to her own house but for her house. She has to go no longer have to live under those strict religious rules and no longer have her parents or her sister's interference of it.

We asked if we are okay?
Told her most days yes, she was being a little bit more confident than we were but she was happy but she was still a little bit nervous.

We asked her if we called the guy from the concert?
Told her yes! And how she was happy 20 years with him. He's better than we ever could've imagined! I told her pictures of our beautiful life now and our two beautiful children.

We were feeling excited, nervous and a little bit scared for future.

We were feeling grateful for all we had been through and for being here and that we're.

Hope we meet again soon.

I told her we're fully healed, but now we're struggling with the same things.

We asked if we ever moved out of our house.

I told her we moved to a beautiful city and currently live in LA in the suburbs.

Hudson, 2024-03-27. This book is a concise but comprehensive guide to the history, present, and possible futures of carbon capture and storage (CCS) policy and action in the United Kingdom (UK). There have been multiple failed starts, promises, and last chances for CCS in Europe, North America, China, and Australia, but thus far it has repeatedly collided with the political and economic realities that the technology is too expensive and complicated to gain and keep policymakers' support. However, in the UK, that might be changing with explicit government support for CCS to help decarbonise industry. Set within the broader context of global interest in CCS, this book first outlines the technologies involved in the types of capture, technology, transport options, and storage options in the UK. It then briefly introduces an overarching policy analysis framework. John Kingdon's multiple streams approach and uses it to give an account of the long history of CCS interest and efforts in three chapters covering the 1970s to 2002, 2003 to 2015, and 2016 to the present day. Marc Hudson focusses on the various arguments made for the introduction of CCS and the slowly shifting coalitions of actors who make those arguments while contrasting these with the perspectives of those opposed to CCS. This book will be of great interest to students, scholars, and policymakers researching and working in the field, as well as the related areas of energy policy, energy transitions, and climate change.
