The School To Prison Pipeline The School To Prison Pipeline

Peter Williamson, Deborah Appleman

The School To Prison Pipeline The School To Prison Pipeline:

The School-to-Prison Pipeline Catherine Y. Kim, Daniel J. Losen, Damon T. Hewitt, 2010-10-15 An in depth analysis of the legal entry points and remedies in the school to prison pipeline The school to prison pipeline is an emerging trend that pushes large numbers of at risk youth particularly children of color out of classrooms and into the juvenile justice system The policies and practices that contribute to this trend can be seen as a pipeline with many entry points from under resourced K 12 public schools to the over use of zero tolerance suspensions and expulsions and to the explosion of policing and arrests in public schools The confluence of these practices threatens to prepare an entire generation of children for a future of incarceration In this comprehensive study of the relationship between American law and the school to prison pipeline co authors Catherine Y Kim Daniel J Losen and Damon T Hewitt analyze the current state of the law for each entry point on the pipeline and propose legal theories and remedies to challenge them Using specific state based examples and case studies the authors assert that law can be an effective weapon in the struggle to reduce the number of children caught in the pipeline address the devastating consequences of the pipeline on families and communities and ensure that our public schools and juvenile justice system further the goals for which they were created to provide meaningful safe opportunities for all the nation s children

Disrupting the School-to-Prison Pipeline Sofía Bahena, North Cooc, Rachel Currie-Rubin, Paul Kuttner, Monica Ng, 2012-12-01 A trenchant and wide ranging look at this alarming national trend Disrupting the School to Prison Pipeline is unsparing in its account of the problem while pointing in the direction of meaningful and much needed reforms The school to prison pipeline has received much attention in the education world over the past few years A fast growing and disturbing development it describes a range of circumstances whereby children are funneled out of public schools and into the juvenile and criminal justice systems Scholars educators parents students and organizers across the country have pointed to this shocking trend insisting that it be identified and understood and that it be addressed as an urgent matter by the larger community This new volume from the Harvard Educational Review features essays from scholars educators students and community activists who are working to disrupt reverse and redirect the pipeline Alongside these authors are contributions from the people most affected youth and adults who have been incarcerated or whose lives have been shaped by the school to prison pipeline Through stories essays and poems these individuals add to the book s comprehensive portrait of how our education and justice systems function and how they fail to serve the interests of many young people

Deconstructing the School-to-Prison Pipeline Johanna Wald, Daniel J. Losen, 2003-11-10 Schools are often the safest most stable and most consistent forces in the lives of many children exerting a positive even miraculous influence They are places where many children are most likely to develop healthy positive relationships with peers and adults However it has become increasingly clear that the opposite also holds true for a number of children including a high proportion of poor children of color Some school policies can drive students out before they have obtained the skills and credentials to advance in their lives leading to devastating and permanent consequences particularly on youths without other safety nets or supports to draw on More and more often schools and prisons are being mentioned in the same sentence the language of both institutions becoming interchangeable This issue describes how school policies can have the effect if not the intent of setting youths on the prison track It also identifies programs and policies that can help schools maintain safety and order while simultaneously reaching out to those students most in need of structure education and guidance Offering a balanced perspective this issue begins to point the way toward less punitive more effective hopeful directions This is the 99th volume of the quarterly journal New Directions for Youth Development From Classroom to Cell Kathryn Howell, 2025 Following World War II reformers and researchers in the United States debated how to properly rehabilitate so called juvenile delinquents Central to this debate was the role education played in children s intellectual and moral development New York City underwent significant changes during this discourse enacting new disciplinary policies in public schools and opening Spofford Juvenile Detention Center now regarded as one of the greatest failures of juvenile justice in American history Though education has long been considered a fundamental avenue to lift individuals from poverty its absence has also been weaponized by schools as a disciplinary technique In what has become known as the school to prison pipeline schools have used the denial of education through in and out of school suspensions and expulsions to reprimand students for inappropriate behaviors By examining the role of education in New York City s school to prison pipeline and youth detention centers using Spofford as a case study it is clear that education has a powerful role in rehabilitating youth offenders though there have been many obstacles in its implementation This historical review asserts that from 1960 2000 the school to prison pipeline in New York City systematically denied children especially Black and Latino youth quality education by criminalizing their behavior removing them from school environments and placing them at higher risk of incarceration This punitive cycle not only undermined their educational development but also perpetuated a cycle of poverty and criminality by stripping them of tools necessary for academic and social mobility By exploring this topic the impact of education on New York City s at risk and incarcerated children particularly on a disproportionately minority population can be assessed to identify ways classrooms in both public schools and detention centers must be amended Furthermore these conclusions challenge the notion that bad kids deserve to be denied education as punishment a central theme in the school to prison pipeline evident in the modern American classroom Provided by author From Education to Incarceration Anthony J. Nocella, Priya Parmar, David Stovall, 2014 From Education to Incarceration Dismantling the School to Prison Pipeline is a ground breaking book that exposes the school system s direct relationship to the juvenile justice system The book reveals various tenets contributing to unnecessary expulsions leaving youth vulnerable to the streets and ultimately behind bars The School to Prison Pipeline Nathern Okilwa, Muhammad Khalifa, Felecia Briscoe, 2017-03-03 This edited volume focuses on the role that school climate and disciplinary practices have on the educational and social experiences of students of color School to

Prison Pipeline: The Plight of the Poor and Minorities Mikayla Singleton, 2018 Approaching Disparities in School Discipline: Theory, Research, Practice, and Social Change Adams, Anthony Troy, 2022-06-30 School discipline is a leading cause of inequities in educational opportunities and contributes to the achievement gap To understand where these disparities originate and what can be done to ensure students have an equal education further study must be done It is crucial for schools and educators to adjust their discipline policies in order to promote social change and support the learning of all students Approaching Disparities in School Discipline Theory Research Practice and Social Change considers theory research methods results and discussions about social change and describes the school discipline quandary by presenting numerous frameworks for understanding disparities in school discipline Covering a range of topics such as cultural bias education reform and school suspensions this reference work is ideal for academicians researchers scholars practitioners instructors and students
