Troubleshooting

There are two major problems that can occur when you build code when using multithreading and ThreadingPool. The first problem is that threads may have difficulty in finding a good object.

If you're not getting a fast rate of return from tasks that you've submitted, you may have a problem with the object that you're using in tasks. It's important to remember the rule:

When building code that calls out and delegates to a task and you always use your main task object.

Remember:

If the object cannot be passed into the task, pass it down to an object in tasking - Remember! If you you are not a U.S. citizen and you want to open an IRA account, you may have funding and investment restrictions. Investment restrictions include that you may have 10% ownership.
