

Allan Bell

The Language of News Media

(περίληψη: Γιώργος Σαμαρτζής)

Written by a linguist who is himself a journalist, this is a uniquely account of the language of media news.

Allan Bell emphasizes the importance of the processes which produce media language, as stories are moulded and modified by various hands. He stresses it is indeed stories that journalists and editors produce, not articles. These stories have viewpoint, values and structure that can be analysed. He is concerned, too, with the role of the audience in influencing media language styles, and in understanding, forgetting or misconceiving the news presented to it.

Based in the frameworks of sociolinguistics and discourse analysis, this book draws together a growing research literature and informs it with the author's own immediate observations and experience as both journalist and researcher.

Allan Bell has been both making and studying media language for many years. He has worked as a journalist and editor in a daily new service, weekly newspaper and montly magazines. He has researched media language in several countries, especially New Zealand and the United Kingdom. He is an Honorary Research Fellow at Victoria University of Wellington, New Zealand, combining his research there with work as a freelance journalist and media consultant.
