The Astrodome Building An American Spectacle:

The Astrodome James Gast, 2014 In the summer of 1960 a group of men in Houston Texas set out to build the largest room in the world That room would have to be large enough for a baseball game sunny enough for grass to grow and with air cool and clear enough for thousands of smokers to puff away in air conditioned comfort Led by a brilliant and colorful politician this collection of architects engineers oilmen scientists and ballplayers created the Astrodome What they built forever transformed the way baseball and other sports were played and viewed for better and for worse More importantly theirs was a uniquely American achievement that reflected the place and extraordinary times in which it was constructed This is the story of the creation and early days of the first domed stadium highlighting the people who participated and the unprecedented solutions they developed for problems that had not previously existed It places the building in its historic context among worldwide architectural and engineering accomplishments as well as its cultural setting in mid century America It is the result of more than a year s research using both primary source archival material and interviews with the participants

Conversations With Food Dorothy Chansky, Sarah W. Tracy, 2021-02-02 Conversations With Food offers readers an array of essays revealing the power of food and its absence to transform relationships between the human and non human realms to define national colonial and postcolonial cultures to help instantiate race gender and class relations and to serve as the basis for policymaking Food functions in these contexts as items in religious or secular law as objects with which to bargain or over which to fight as literary trope and as a way to improve or harm health individual or collective The anthology ranges from Ancient Greece to the posthuman fairy underworld from the codifying of French culinary heritage to the strategic marketing of 100 calorie snacks from the European famine after the Second World War to the lush and exotic cuisines of culinary tourism today Conversations With Food will engage anyone interested in discovering the disciplinary breadth and depth of food studies The anthology is ideally suited for introductory and advanced courses in food studies as it includes essays in a range of humanities and social science disciplines and each author draws cross disciplinary linkages between their own work and other essays in the volume This thematic and conceptual intercalation when read with the editors introduction makes the collection an exceptionally strong representation of the field of food studies
