Hallion, 2015-01-22 There is no question which country has made the greatest strides in developing its airpower capability Over the last two decades China s air force the People s Liberation Army Air Force PLAAF has transformed itself from a large poorly trained force operating aircraft based on 1950s Soviet designs to a leaner and meaner force flying advanced Russian and indigenously produced fourth generation fighters This remarkable transformation is still a work in progress but China has made up a lot of ground in a short time The ever accelerating transformation of the People s Republic of China PRC in the years since the era of Mao Zedong particularly in its economic and military growth has been nothing short of remarkable Developments over the last quarter century effectively since the tragedy of Tiananmen Square and the collapse of the Soviet Union and Warsaw Pact alliance have been more so still The relationship of this increasingly robust and growing power to the established global community is a complex one and no thornier aspect of that relationship can be found than the uneasy interplay among the PRC Taiwan and the countries that deal with both In late October 2010 a distinguished international group of experts on airpower military affairs and the PRC Taiwan relationship gathered in Taipei to examine the present state and future prospects of the People s Liberation Army Air Force PLAAF The conference was the latest in a series of international conferences on the affairs of the People s Liberation Army PLA cosponsored by the Chinese Council of Advanced Policy Studies CAPS the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace CEIP the U S National Defense University NDU and the RAND Corporation Over 3 days speakers presented 14 papers on aspects of airpower the PLAAF and the implications for Taiwan and panels discussed and debated the presentations taking questions and comments from an audience of 115 registered attendees with many others dropping by This book is a compilation of the edited papers reflecting comments and additions stimulated by the dialogue and discussion at the conference to examine present state and future prospects of the People s Liberation Air Force PLAAF The Chinese Air Force Richard P. Studies, National Defense University, Center for the Study of Chinese Military Affairs (CSCMA), U. S. Government, 2017-09-24

This vital report from a distinguished international group of experts on airpower military affairs and the People's Republic of China PRC Taiwan relationship examines the present state and future prospects of the People's Liberation Army Air Force PLAAF. The report was produced by the Center for the Study of Chinese Military Affairs CSCMA of the National Defense University. In the ongoing military buildup by the People's Republic of China, one of the crucial areas of concern is the force disparity between the PRC and Taiwan. The traditional technological edge that Taiwan's military air power forces enjoyed over the mainland is a thing of the past. Where a decade ago Taiwan's airmen flew aircraft that were at least one and in some cases two technological generations superior to those of the PRC today, they are already in a position of inferiority with their aging F-16A/B, AIDC F-CK1 Ching Kuo and Mirage 2000 fighters increasingly outclassed and outnumbered by newer PRC aircraft such as the Su-27, J-10, J-11 and Su-30 aircraft. Where a decade ago Taiwan's airmen could operate with relative impunity over the Taiwan Strait facing a limited range surface-to-air missile threat built around derivatives of the then 40-year-old Khrushchev-era SA-2, today they face far more dangerous S-300, SA-10, 20 systems that deny access over the strait and the prospect of the S-400 which installed along the coast of the PRC will reach across the strait and beyond Taiwan itself. Coupled with the PRC's introduction of precision air-to-surface munitions, air refueling, airborne early warning, large numbers of short and medium range ballistic missiles, land attack cruise missiles and an increased emphasis on electronic and cyber warfare, the challenges facing Taiwan's air defenders have never been graver than at the present time. Significantly, because of the longstanding ties between the United States and Taiwan, any prospect of cross-strait conflict carries with it the implicit risk of igniting a broader and even more devastating conflict. Clearly, it is in the interest of all parties to ensure that the PRC Taiwan relationship evolves in a peaceful, mutually beneficial fashion. Beijing's missile-centric strategy presents a number of challenges for regional stability. Barring the fielding of effective countermeasures, Chinese conventional aerospace power, specifically short and medium range ballistic and extended range land attack cruise missiles, may over time give the PLA a decisive advantage in future conflicts around China's periphery.

Berkowitz, 2017-03-06 China's approach to nuclear deterrence has been broadly consistent since its first test in 1964 but it has recently accelerated nuclear force modernization China's strategic environment is likely to grow more complex and nuclear constituencies are gaining a larger bureaucratic voice Beijing is unlikely to change official nuclear policies but will probably increase emphasis on nuclear deterrence and may adjust the definition of key concepts The Chinese Air Force

- Evolving Concepts, Roles, and Capabilities National Defense University, 2019-01-10 An extraordinary list of contributors addresses the Chinese Air Force in a truly comprehensive manner providing insight to a level that hasn't been seen before in any single volume on the PLA or its components. The chapters offer a complete picture of where the Chinese Air Force is today, where it has come from, and most importantly, where it is headed. Aging F-16A/B, AIDC F-CK1 Ching Kuo, and Mirage 2000 fighters are increasingly being outclassed and outnumbered by newer PRC aircraft such as the Su-27, J-10, J-11, and Su-30 aircraft. Why buy a book you can download for free? We print this book so you don't have to. First, you gotta find a good, clean, legible copy and make sure it's the latest version, not always easy. Some documents found on the web are missing some pages or the image quality is so poor they are difficult to read. We look over each document carefully and replace poor quality images by going back to the original source document. We proof each document to make sure it's all there, including all changes. If you find a good copy, you could print it using a network printer you share with 100 other people; typically, it's either out of paper or toner. If it's just a 10-page document, no problem, but if it's 250 pages, you will need to punch 3 holes in all those pages and put it in a 3-ring binder. Takes at least an hour. It's much more cost-effective to just order the latest version from Amazon.com. This book includes original commentary, which is copyright material. Note that government documents are in the public domain. We print these large documents as a service so you don't have to. The books are compact, tightly bound, full size 8 1/2 by 11 inches, with large text and glossy covers. 4th Watch Publishing Co. is a HUBZONE SDVOSB. <https://usgovpub.com>
