1. Introduction: The purpose of this study is to investigate the impact of social media on the mental health of adolescents. The study aims to explore the relationship between social media usage and various mental health outcomes, including anxiety, depression, and self-esteem.

2. Methodology: The study employed a quantitative research design, utilizing a survey questionnaire to collect data from a sample of 500 adolescents aged 13-18. The questionnaire assessed their frequency of social media use, perceived mental health status, and the presence of specific symptoms.

3. Results: The findings revealed a significant positive correlation between increased social media usage and higher levels of anxiety and depression. Adolescents who spent more than 3 hours daily on social media reported higher rates of these conditions compared to those with lower usage. Conversely, no significant relationship was found between social media use and self-esteem.

4. Conclusion: The study suggests that excessive social media use may contribute to the development or exacerbation of mental health issues in adolescents. It is recommended that parents and educators monitor and guide their usage, promoting a balanced approach to digital technology.

5. Limitations: The study's limitations include its cross-sectional design, which cannot establish causality, and the reliance on self-reported data, which may be subject to bias.

6. Future Research: Further research is needed to explore the underlying mechanisms linking social media to mental health and to evaluate the effectiveness of interventions aimed at reducing negative impacts.
