

Vestibular Tests & Measures: Study Guide

Nystagmus is described by the direction of the quick phase. Rotary / Torsional N. is described by the direction that the superior pole of the iris moves, L or R.		Directions to perform TEST	Positive sign demonstrated by	Central vs. Peripheral
Eye Movement Range		Take your finger out past 18-24" to examine if the patient has full ocular range of motion. Ask the patient to follow moving target that is held several feet in front of the patient's face (to avoid convergence of eyes.)		Combination ocular muscles
Smooth Pursuit	Maintains gaze stabilization when rate of eye movement is $\leq 60^\circ/\text{sec}$, i.e. slower than VOR Gain testing	Hold the patient's head stationary. Have the patient follow your slowly moving finger horizontally (from center to 30° right and then to 30° left), and then vertically (center to 30° up to 30° down). Can use an "H" pattern. The test can be repeated; you may have to hold the eyelids up in order to see the downward eye movement clearly.	Eyes do not move synchronously or symmetrically.	Central
End Point Nystagmus (physiological response)		During maintenance of an extreme eye position. Head fixed. Eyes follow my finger and then held at the end point.	1-2 beats is normal.	Central
Gaze evoked Nystagmus (abnormal response)	Observe direction of nystagmus in each test position.	Hold the patient's head stationary. Have the patient follow your finger so she/he is looking 30° to the right, left, up, down. Pause for 20 seconds in each of those positions to observe for nystagmus. Note the direction of the nystagmus in each position. Be sure to keep your finger 18-24 inches away from the patient's face throughout the entire test.	Persistent nystagmus	Central
Saccades	Extra involuntary eye movements during horizontal and vertical tracking.	Normal saccadic movement: hold the patient's head stationary. Hold your finger about 15 degrees to one side of your nose. Ask the patient to look at your nose, then at your finger, repeating several times. Do this from the right, left, up, and down. You are looking for the number of eye movements it takes for the patient's eyes to reach the target. Normal is < 2 .		Central
Near Point Convergence (c/s glasses)	Normal: diplopia at $\leq 5\text{cm}$ from nose; observe for symmetrical eye movement	Hold target at nose level, arm's length away. Focus on the target as you move it toward your nose. Stop when target turns double. Measure distance from nose to target. Repeat 2-3 times.	$\geq 6\text{cm}$ = "Convergence insufficiency"	Central
Diplopia		Patient report of double vision. Test both near and far field of vision.		Central
Oscillopsia: visual blurring with head movement	Decreased VOR gaze stability with head motion	Patient report of environment moving or oscillating, as they walk through it. May also be reported as "seaweed" movement without head mvmt.		Peripheral or Central
