Preface

Enron Corporation was an American energy, commodities, and services providing company based in Houston, Texas. Before its bankruptcy on December 2, 2001, Enron employed approximately 20,000 staff and was one of the World's major electricity, natural gas, communications, and pulp and paper companies, with claimed revenues of nearly $111 billion during 2000. Fortune, an American business magazine, named Enron "America's Most Innovative Company" for six consecutive years. The story ends with the bankruptcy of one of America's largest corporations. Enron's collapse affected the lives of thousands of employees, shareholders and other investors. At the end of 2001, it was revealed that its reported financial condition was sustained by an institutionalized, systematic, and creatively planned accounting fraud, known since as the Enron known example of willful corporate fraud and on question of the accounting practices and activities of many corporations in the United States and was a factor in the enactment of the *Sarbanes-Oxley Act of 2002*¹. The scandal also affected the greater business world by causing the dissolution of the Arthur Andersen accounting firm.

History of Enron Corporation

Birth of the Company

Enron began as Northern Natural Gas Company, organized in Omaha, Nebraska, in 1930 by three other companies. North American Light & Power Company and United Light & Railways Company each held a 35 percent stake in the new enterprise, while Lone Star Gas Corporation owned the remaining 30 percent. The company's founding came just a few months after the stock market crash of 1929², an inauspicious time to launch a new venture. Several aspects of the Great Depression actually worked in Northern's favor, however. Consumers initially were not enthusiastic about natural gas as a heating fuel, but its low cost led to its acceptance during tough economic times. High unemployment brought the new company a ready supply of cheap labor to build its pipeline system. In addition, the 24-inch steel pipe, which could transport six times the amount of gas carried by 12-inch cast iron pipe, had just been developed. Northern grew rapidly in the 1930s, doubling its system capacity within two years of its incorporation and bringing the first natural gas supply to the state of Minnesota.

Public Offerings in 1940s

The 1940s brought changes in Northern's regulation and ownership. In 1941, United Light & Railways sold its share of Northern to the public, and in 1942 Lone Star Gas distributed its holdings to its stockholders. North American Light & Power would hold on to its stake until 1947, when it sold its shares to underwriters who then offered the stock to the public. Northern was listed on the New York Stock Exchange that year.

Growth through Acquisitions

Northern continued expanding during the 1970s. During the 1970s, Northern became a principal
