Parenting in the Pandemic Rebecca Lowenhaupt, George Theoharis, 2021-05-01 In March of 2020 our daily lives were upended by the COVID pandemic and subsequent school closures With work and school shifting online a new and ongoing set of demands has been placed on parents as school moved to online virtual and hybrid models of learning Families need to balance professional responsibilities with parenting and supporting their children's education As education professors we find ourselves in a particular position as our expertise collides with the reality of schooling our own children in our homes during a global pandemic This book focuses on the experiences of education faculty who navigate this relationship as pandemic professionals and pandemic parents In this collection of personal essays we explore parenting in the pandemic among education professors Through our stories we share our perspectives on this moment of upheaval as we find ourselves confronting practical and impractical aspects of long held theories about what school could be seeing up close and personally the pedagogy our children endure online watching education policy go awry in our own living rooms and kitchens and bathrooms making high stakes decisions about our children's and other children's access to opportunity and trying to maintain our careers at the same time In this collision of personal and professional identities we find ourselves reflecting on fundamental questions about the purpose and design of schooling the value of our work as education professors and the precious relationships we hope to maintain with our children through this difficult time Praise for Parenting in the Pandemic Lowenhaupt and Theoharis have curated a magnificent collection of essays that captures the hopes fears tensions and possibilities of parenting in a time of crisis A gift to parents and educators everywhere as we continue to process and reflect on what the pandemic has taught us about what it means to educate others and perhaps through a renewed imagination our very own children Sonya Douglass Horsford Teachers College Columbia University In this powerful collection of essays we have a rare window into how the personal and professional worlds of academics collided during the COVID 19 pandemic What emerges from these reflections is an intimate portrait of the longstanding tensions in our lives as public intellectuals and parents that have long burned as embers but are now set ablaze by the public health economic and educational crisis we have lived through during the last year Reading these essays will help us to see questions of education policy and practice in a new more personal light

Ushering In A Glorious New Future Elaine B. Todd PhD, 2022-09-08 Macie was a brilliant gifted articulate congenial and much loved young woman Her mother was not married when Macie was born As she came of age Macie constantly inquired and searched to find her biological father No one was willing to tell her about the circumstances of her birth Her family members shielded her from possible demeaning remarks of unkind children and neighbors to enable her to develop high self esteem She soared to the highest levels of scholastic accomplishments As valedictorian of her high school she presented an outstanding graduation speech A successful career seemed assured Having accepted Christianity at an early age Macie devoted her time to spiritual pursuits until a budding romance changed her beliefs and caused her to reevaluate her ancestral Christian roots Choosing to dabble in astrological predictions and to question her Christian tenets she sought to study philosophies or belief systems contrary to what her close knit Christian family held sacred She moved from her hometown to avoid the influences of her family members and their religious dictates When she was infected with HIV she returned to her ingrained faith sought the prayers of her family and other Christian followers She continued searching for her biological father never realizing that her heavenly Father was always available for her Ultimately her redemption and acceptance of God s grace love and mercy once again enabled her to be beckoned into a glorious new future of eternal life
