

BASIC MATH TEACHING STRATEGIES

The building blocks of mathematics start early on, when learning the basic skills. The key to teaching basic math skills that students can apply and remember for future instruction is to use several teaching strategies.

Repetition

By repeating and reviewing previous formulas, lessons, and information, students are better able to comprehend concepts at a faster rate.

Timed testing

Taking a short test and then grading the test in class will help teachers assess student understanding.

Pair Work

Group work is a simple strategy that allows students to work and problem-solve with a buddy. They can discuss the problems and work together.

Manipulation Tools

The use of blocks, fruits, balls, or other manipulation tools help students learn the basics of place value, addition, subtraction, and other areas of basic math.

Math games

Teachers should be sure to incorporate a strategy into games to help students learn the material.
